Sunni militants fighting under the banner of Al Qaeda appeared to make gains across Anbar Province on Saturday, using snipers and rocket-propelled grenades in heavy street fighting as they secured nearly full control of Falluja and captured the strategic town Karma. Government forces and the tribal militias fighting with them seemed unable to resist the militants advances. My humble words for my 71st birthday celebration on 3 Kings Day. i've been asked many times how i celebrate my birthday. Since i celebrate every day i wake up alive that for me is the best way i can answer the question regarding the celebration of my birthday. At my age i believe i've lived much longer than i had expected to live. And that's an excellent reason why i should celebrate every day i wake up, look up at the sky to see if there are stars or the moon out and feel the palpitation of my heart to confirm that i'm alive for real. The reaction to my allergies can make me aware that i'm alive, but that's something i don't really like to use because it can affect my desire to celebrate life.

i believe we should celebrate every day just for having awoken. When i've this idea with people they have question it. My response is that we should pay attention to the relativity of the human destiny. Because it doesn't matter how miserable one feels and how bad one thinks conditions are, the fact remains one is alive. And when one feels miserable all one has to do is to look around and one will see another person in worse conditions doing what might look impossible and facing the challenge without complaining. If one feels miserable because he or she lost an eye the person he or she sees dealing with the challenge that seems impossible is totally blind. That's why we should always take into consideration the relativity of the human destiny. When we start a new year or the calendar is telling us a new year has started we should look at it as a chance to complete what we have not been able to accomplish in the past. When we face a crisis we should look at it as an opportunity to deal with it and to find a solution. It doesn't matter where we are. For example, when the earthquake devastated Mexico City and there was a major crisis we came up with the idea to raise funds from the prison population in order to give a hand to the victims of the earthquake. We talked to the staff and the idea was accepted. We were allowed to set up tables and get the prisoners to sign a form to have the money discounted from their funds. Within two hours we had raised over five thousand dollars. At first we had no idea how to help the victims. But after discussing the issue we were able to come up with a solution. We were able to do what for others seemed impossible. Celebrate life and not the commodification of it.

the number of hunger strikers in Guantanamo has doubled since the final set of official figures was released by the US authorities on December 2 2013. The report, compiled by human rights charity Reprieve, uses prisoner testimony to reveal that 33 men detained in Guantanamo are on hunger strike, with 16 being force fed. The Joint Task Force at Guantanamo, which runs the prison, announced in December of 2013 that they would no longer release official figures of those on hunger strike because they did not want to 'further their protests'. The report also reveals that authorities at the prison are punishing those on hunger strike by sending them to the strictest of the camps, "Camp V Echo". One detainee described his experiences there to his lawyer at Reprieve: "My cell in the dreadful Camp V Echo is constructed in a strange manner. It is designed to torture the person who is held there. All the surfaces made of steel. The bed is steel. The walls are steel. The floor is steel. The ceiling is steel. There is no toilet, but the hole in the ground is made of steel." British resident Shaker Aamer, who remains imprisoned despite having been cleared by both the Bush and Obama administrations, said: "[I was] strapped to the bed for 24 hours except to use the toilet. The [force-feeding] tube was in 24 hours a day. We would be fed for 30-40 minutes each time, with Ensure cans, two cans, three times a day. Some of the prisoners became zombies, as if they were already dead. I dropped weight to 130 pounds. I told the doctors, 'I want to die peacefully. I want no intervention.' But they refused this." Mr Aamer's British wife and four British children, the youngest of whom he has never met, live in London. British Prime Minister David Cameron has raised his case directly with President Obama, yet Mr Aamer remains imprisoned. There is an ongoing police investigation into Mr Aamer's treatment at the hands of British and US officials. 155 men are still detained in Guantanamo Bay, 77 of who have been cleared for release. Yesterday (Saturday) marked the twelfth anniversary of the first arrival of prisoners at the detention camp. Of the 779 men known to have been held there 624 have been released. More prisoners have died than have been put on trial. In an endlessly mutating world of media forms, scholars, creative practitioners

Tammy Dickinson, United States Attorney for the Western District of Missouri, announced that a Nixa, Missouri man was sentenced in federal court today for receiving and distributing child pornography over the Internet. Charles Williams, 28, of Nixa, was sentenced by U.S. District Judge Brian C. Wimes to 10 years and 10 months in federal prison without parole. Williams, who pleaded guilty on August 7, 2013, admitted that he used peer-to-peer file-sharing programs on two laptop computers to download and distribute dozens of videos and photos of child pornography over the Internet from April 9 to September 27, 2011.

A Nixa police officer used a peer-to-peer file-sharing program to connect to Williams' computer over the Internet. The officer located child pornography on the computer and obtained a search warrant for Williams' residence. Officers executed the search warrant on September 27, 2011 and seized two laptop computers, two cameras, two videogame consoles, 115 CDs/DVDs, and a VHS tape. Among the files discovered on one of the laptop computers was a video of a 4- to 5-year-old child being raped by an adult. Williams was arrested on September 22, 2011.

Investigators conducted an examination of Williams' computers and found 52 incomplete or partially downloaded videos of child pornography; 29 saved videos of

We can share and enjoy the act of and make it meaningful. We can celebrate any such moment and give meaning to our daily life and make it a real important cultural event. Life is an act of giving and receiving. But when the sharing of gifts is commodified it becomes another act of consumerism and our culture is the one that suffers its consequences. Any moment we celebrate our culture we are helping to pass it on to future generations and to strengthened it. But if we allow it to become an act of consumerism we are contributing to its vulgarization and its demise. Let's celebrate 3 pass it on to future generations and to strengthened it. But if we allow it to become an act of consumerism we are contributing to its vulgarization and its demise. Let's celebrate 3 Kings Day and enjoy it to the utmost. If we believe a better and more just world is possible, we don't have to go to a far away place in the globe to make our contribution to such a lofty cause. We can do it right where we live. But we have to be willing to roll up our sleeves and do the hard work. Words are important, but it's the work that bears fruits. And if we learn one lesson in life that's worthwhile holding on and passing it on is that the only thing that's impossible is stand the ways in which media transforms and dissolves boundaries among disciplines and creates new forms of knowledge and cultural production. The Master of Arts (M.A.) in Media Studies provides students with the conceptual and practical tools necessary to prepare themselves to engage some of the fundamental challenges and complexities of our times. The program interrogates the social, practical, economic, political and theoretical stakes of mediation considered in the widest possible sense, encompassing more traditional approaches to the study of media (print, film, photography, audio and television), in conjunction with approaches that address the massive shifts produced by the computer and internet including gaming and social media Students will benefit from an academic environment shaped not only by theorists and critics, but also by distinguished practitioners of the forms being studied. Students study and work among theorists, artists and designers and are taught by faculty-practitioners. Our courses are small, intensive, seminars taught exclusively by professors. The program is 30 credits and can be completed in threesemesters. Among the core requirements are (I) six credit hours of courses

This case was prosecuted by Assistant U.S. Attorney Randall D. Eggert. It was investigated by the FBI and the Nina Police Department. Last week, the Justice Department convened hearings under the Prison Rape Elimination Act to examine the prevalence of rape and sexual abuse in the nation's prisons and juvenile detention centers. As we've reported, the department has found alarming rates of abuse by staff on youngsters in custody. In a 2013 survey of more than 8,700 juveniles housed in 326 facilities across the country, 8 percent said they experienced sex abuse at the hands of the staff supervising them. Twenty percent of those who said they were victimized by staff said it happened on more than 10 occasions. But perhaps the most surprising finding: Nine out of 10 victims were males abused by female staffers. The prison rape elimination legislation first passed in 2003, but it then took the Justice Department nearly 10 years to study the issue and release rules for prisons and juvenile detention centers to implement. Beginning late last year, auditors contracted by the federal

Take care, abrazos, Oscar Lopez Rivera Anarchism is part of a broader range of libertarian socialist thought and action that includes the practical achievements of revolutionary Spain in 1936; reaches further to worker-owned enterprises spreading today in the American rust belt, in northern Mexico, in Egypt, and many other countries, most extensively in the Basque country in Spain; and encompasses the many cooperative movements around the world and a good part of feminist and civil and human rights initiatives. This broad tendency in human development seeks to identify structures of hierarchy, authority and domination that constrain human development, and then subject them to a very reasonable challenge: Justify yourself. Not many people come to Fort McMurray, the notorious Alberta boom town on the edge of one of the world's largest industrial developments, to commune with the great northern woods. Most are here for the overtime, for the paid vacations, for the blue-collar jobs that pay six figures, for the work. This means that all of the bad things you've heard about Fort McMoney are true: the traffic really is murderous, there are liquor stores (many open until 2 a.m.) in every strip mall, and the place has a depressingly large population of desperately lonely guys blowing ridiculously fat paycheques on steroids, tattoos, monster trucks, and peelers. When [art] becomes the object of academic disciplines as it is today, discourse can become a site of struggle among the factions and interest groups that compete for the cultural authority to speak about [art]. The expert critical and technical languages that these groups invent can foster a social bond among those who share them, but they can also alienate and exclude outsiders. Korsyn (2003:6)

Warning do not go to that caf with your art work. I brought my portfolio and they reluctantly approved my selling there and then I got all days of the month except for last Thursday to sell after paying the $200 for one of the 6 wall space areas available and then they used my art work as fodder for a bad art salon where they sat around laughing at it and then someone spray painted a “Bad Art” stencil on each piece they voted was true bad art and I sold only one of them and even thought they guy who paid twice as much as what I was asking after it was officially marked as bad art and maybe the rest of the pieces went up in value I felt totally crushed but not as much as one of the artists on another wall who nearly committed suicide. I ask them why they were doing it and it was to train art inspectors for up and coming “charettes” to decide who gets to sell on last Thursday and who does not . Thank you city commission-

Brace's theory of an organization devoted to helping poor children was radical. His progressive ideas translated into far-reaching services and reforms for poor and homeless children, working women, needy families and disabled boys and girls at a time when services for these groups were few and far between. Educated to be a minister, Brace was determined to give children an alternative to life in the squalid slums and teeming New York City streets. His theories were grounded in the conviction that institutional care stunted and destroyed children. According to Brace, the answers to transforming New York's orphans and street children into self-reliant members of society were gainful work, education, and a wholesome family atmosphere. Charles Loring Brace's work transformed the face of social services and social reforms in New York City and across the nation. His imprint his legacy has benefited millions and millions of children. Of course, much has changed since his time, including the concepts of children's rights and parental responsibility, but Brace's imprint remains an enduring one. The Orphan Train Movement. Between 1853 and 1929, more than 150,000 abandoned, abused and orphaned children were rescued from the streets and slums of New York City and taken by train to start new lives with families on farms across the country. The emphasis was on giving these needy children a family life.

Hong Kong. He seems to have complete and total trust in the Hong Kong political and judiciary system: "Hong Kong has a strong tradition of free speech. People think China, Great Firewall ... but the people of Hong Kong have a long tradition of protesting on the streets, making their views known ... and I believe the Hong Kong government is actually independent in relation to a lot of other leading Western governments."

Here is the very short video, which shows the officers throwing Mikey to the ground, followed by a direct punch to the face by one officer and another officer stepping on Mikey a few times in a quick burst.

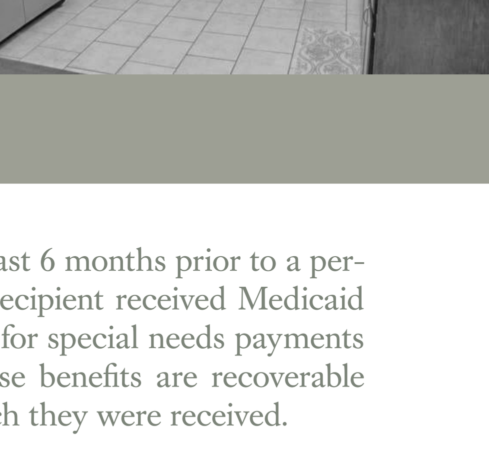
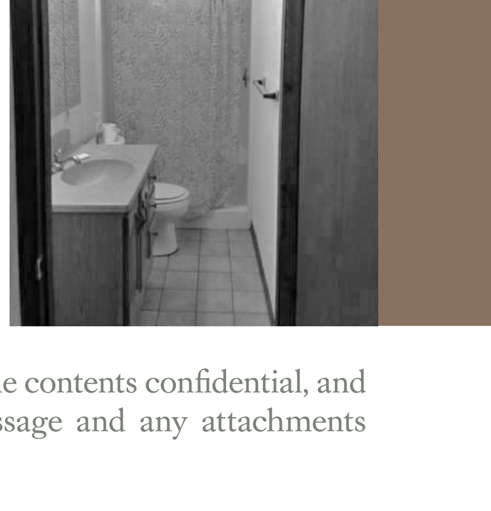
The Personnel Department 10250 SW Greenburg Road Building #4 Suite 116 Portland, OR 97223 * Location: Wilsonville * Compensation: 10.50-11.00 I am in receipt of your fax dated 10/7/13 which asked about recoverable assistance if you sign up for OHP on or after the age of 55. Federal law generally dictates what is recoverable assistance. There are Oregon Administrative Rules which state what is recoverable assistance for Oregon. Generally, assistance for Medicaid (and OHP) is recoverable for 1) a person who is age 55 or older or 2) who has been permanently institutionalized (such as lived in a nursing facility and received assistance) for at least 6 months prior to a person's death. Also, 3) if the recipient received Medicaid cash benefits (such as those for special needs payments or General Assistance), these benefits are recoverable regardless of the age at which they were received.



Finally, if there is a claim in the estate of a deceased Medicaid recipient, the personal representative or the affiant of the estate can request an assistance summary which will give specific information about the charges for recoverable assistance. I hope that this information is helpful to you.

This e-mail may contain information that is privileged, confidential, or otherwise exempt from disclosure under applicable law. If you are not the addressee or it appears from the context or otherwise that you have received this e-mail in error, please advise me immediately by reply e-mail, keep the contents confidential, and immediately delete the message and any attachments from your system.



Yes, this is the case. We have many elderly (or over 55) clients who cannot afford the cost of nursing home, assisted living, or other types of care and who have to spend down all of their resources in order to get the care that they need (and deserve). Some have homes, which, if not sold during the client's lifetime, become estate assets after the client dies. These estate assets are ones from which the State can seek recovery in order to reimburse it for the Medicaid provided. The scenarie of collecting from estates of deceased recipients is not an unusual one, then, whether it is for those clients who receive long-term care or for those who receive OHP assistance.

The recovery, you should know, is only on estate assets (or those assets which meet the State's expanded definition of an estate asset). If the recoverable Medicaid paid is valued at $200,000 and the amount of the estate is $100,000, then Medicaid can only collect what is in the estate - the $100,000 at most. So, not all of the bill is paid - in many instances. In fact most Medicaid recipients only have about $2000 in resources because that is the limit allowed in order to receive Medicaid.

The real question to ask is if you really want to give up the chance to have some kind of heatlh care. I often tell people that their family want to see them healthy rather than ill - even if it means lower inheritances, etc. It is certainly something that I would tell my family - although quite frankly I don't have a lot of assets.. We have an opportunity now to provide health care to a wide range of people that often had to be told to wait for their name to come up on a list or even worse yet who were told that despite their relatively low income, they still didn't qualify for some kind of assistance. Our society has determined that it won't provide some health care "for free." Maybe one of these days that will change, but in the meantime, it has at least determined that no one should have to go without health care. That is a huge step in and of itself.

The degree of surveillance will simply escalate along with the technology -- what's unjust is the access to the information: the proverbial level-playing-field was the one big "underlying" promise of the Internet... We all should be able to learn where the rogue-cops, corrupt CEOs, gangsters, embedded politicos live, what they buy, how much they're paid and by-whom, etc. Years ago I remember a story about a small town in France(?) that mounted accessible-web-cams in most public areas (including police stations) so that any citizen at any time could monitor and report on transgressions to the common-good, with the result that police were hardly needed as there was little crime and the community felt much safer/responsible. Is Obama Bin Laden still playing cards?

A new server failed earlier in the day. It wasn't in use yet except as a backup but because file systems were NFS mounted from it, anytime a customer used something that referenced those file systems such as 'df' or 'quota', the process hung waiting for it to respond eventually cluttering up memory on shellx.

To stop this, I had to unmount the file systems from that machine but I needed to reboot the file server which has users home directories on it in order to do that. I should have used the force option because otherwise the reboot also is going to wait for the machine that is dead to respond and I forgot to do that.

The whole mess necessitated a trip to the co-location facility to restore, and while I was there I fixed some start-up script errors and applied some updates which required a few more reboots to apply and test.

On another note, if anyone is considering content management systems like Drupal, Concrete5, Joomla, or WordPress, they will all run fine on our platform. If you need help getting them running please e-mail support and I'll be glad to help you get them setup.

A forensic examination of two external drives located in the crawl space above Miller's bathroom revealed the presence of several thousand images and more than 1,100 videos of child pornography. The images dated back to 2002. The children in the videos ranged in age from toddler to teenager. The file paths of some of the images indicated that they were originally downloaded via a peer-to-peer file sharing network. Images and videos of child pornography were also located on a laptop computer seized from the basement of the residence. Additional images of child pornography were recovered from several CDs seized from the storage facility rented by Miller. Braving heavy rains, roughly one thousand Hawaiians traveled to the town of Hale`iwa on the North Shore of Oahu Sunday to take part in a march against Monsanto, adding their support to the growing "tsunami" against genetically modified (GM) crops. The Aloha Aina (or "Love of the Land") March, organized by a number of environmental and community groups, was called to celebrate some regional successes against the biotech industry and to raise awareness of the fight, calling on Hawaiian landowners to join the movement and "evict Monsanto." Arctic air has settled into the northern U.S. along with gusty winds and snow showers. The result will be bitter cold and dangerous wind chills for parts of the Plains and Midwest. Wind chill values are forecast to be 20-40 degrees below zero in this region where Wind Chill Warnings and Advisories are in effect. Snow showers will accompany the cold temperatures.

Good day Friend, I am pleased to get across to you for a very urgent and profitable business proposal, I got your e-mail address in Internet while browsing after I decided to contact you and ask for your assistance in this urgent matter, requiring trust and confidentiality. I am Mr. Ahmed Al Sultan, the Branch manager, National Bank of Abu Dhabi Al Ain Branch,Al Ain BranchAli Ibn Abi Talib St, Near Oud Al Tawba Roundabout,(UNITED ARABEMIRATES), Married with Five children.

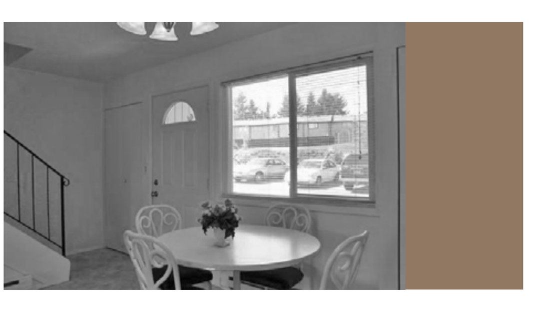
I am writing this letter to ask for your support and cooperation to carry out this business opportunity in my department, On June 6, 1999, an America Oil consultant/contractor with Petroleum Corporation, Mr. Thomas Stone, made a numbered time (fixed) deposit for twelve calendar months, Valued at US$12,000,000.00 (Twelve Million



United State Dollars in my branch upon maturity. I sent a routine notification to his forwarding address but got no reply. After a month, we sent a reminder and finally we discovered from his contract employers, the Petroleum Corporation that Mr. Thomas Stone, died in the plane crash On October 31, 1999, (an Egyptian Boeing 767 Flight 990) with other passengers on board.

Most asttorning of my discovery was that, all records bear no next of kin, meaning no member of Mr. Thomas Stone, family knows about the deposit therefore, no member of his family will ever come forward to claim the money, In order for the bank not to transfer the said sum of Twelve Million United State Dollars ($12,000,000.00) as unclaimed funds to the emirates treasury account, the above stated funds most be claimed immediately by somebody standing in as late Mr. Thomas Stone. First there was surprise, then shock, then anger. By nightfall thousands across India had taken to the streets in spontaneous protests against an unexpected supreme court decision on Wednesday reversing a judgment that had decriminalised gay sex in the country. Activists had expected the court simply to rubber-stamp the original 2009 ruling. Now India will rejoin the more than 70 countries -- mainly in Africa, the Middle East and south Asia -- where homosexual relations are illegal. The reinstatement of a 153-year-old law passed under British rule and based on 16th-century English legislation means "carnal intercourse" between consenting adults of the same sex is once more defined as "unnatural" and punishable by up to 10 years in jail. Waving multicoloured flags and wearing black bandanas, the crowd of protesters that gathered at the Jantar Mantar, a favourite point for demonstrations in the Indian capital, Delhi, was full of young men and women. Some think of neurons firing as digital information, with the potential for firing as analog information. The potential, itself, can be considered as a sequence of digital events. The process could be likened to a bicycle pump pumping up a balloon until it bursts! Each compression of the pump and the subsequent burst can be considered a digital event! She patted her frock lock. O wayward! Her feet bicycled the air. Her feet occasioned a somatic event, a stolen bicycle and its somatic response. With the new guns, he fires away. Perfect trajectories are in Pusan, dust. Policeman Dick is riding by, a bicycle beauty,the body leaning into the dust. Somatic!. Two bicycle wheels hold the frame up. Earlier he said to her, "Someone always gets hurt in a stickup." "You like it," Gibbs said, the thing works like a bicycle, keeps going round arcs towards the curb, beneath the trees where girls are dangerous. He walked home. Someday he'll have a bicycle. It is easiest to ride in the dark. There are not many animals left here, a few snakes and you can avoid them by leaning. "The frame's held up by the wheels," said Policeman Dick. He patted her frock lock. O wayward! Her feet bicycled the air. Her feet lifted him on the frame and the rest of her fucked him. She said, "Someone always gets hurt in a stickup. You like it." She said that it worked like a charm, she kept going everywhere, just like a child. "What a wonderful adventure I'm having!" she said, "just like a little girl!" She walked home thinking someday she'd have a bicycle. It's easy to ride, even in the dark and the animals are terrific! The grey wool suit that Gene Kelly wore in 1952 in the centerpiece number of the beloved MGM Hollywood musical "Singin' in the Rain" arguably one of the most famous musical numbers in all film history realized more than $106,250 as part of Heritage Auctions Entertainment & Music event on Thursday, more than five times the pre-auction estimate. "This is such a wonderful and historically important costume," said Margaret Barrett, Director of Entertainment & Music Auctions at Heritage. "Collectors and fans recognized that, and they came after it accordingly. It's a treasure of Hollywood history and of our American popular culture." The suit was purchased by Planet Hollywood International, which plans to display the suit at one of its properties, though it has not yet decided which one. A U.S. drone strike targeted a wedding convoy in Yemen's al-Baitha province, killing 14 and injuring 22. Night Market: A bustling tent market just south east of intersetion of Yan'an Road / Pinghai Road (past Huansha Rd, along Renhe Rd) every night. Here you can find clothing of various (and interesting) Chinese designs, Mao memorabilia, jewelery, paper fans, pipes, lighters, eletronic accessories, luggage, handicrafts and other items that most Chinese cities have. Pirated DVDs and counterfeit handbags are for sale as well. You can also find a lot of those silk-screen printed paintings/embroidery things that the silk market also has. Bargain very hard; many stalls sell the same merchandise, so be prepared to walk away (although this traveler found it almost impossible to get cheaper prices). Be careful buying "antiques" because they are probably new, and pearls. Often the pearl culturing process has been very short, and in fact the "pearl" is a plastic marble with only the thinnest of cultured skin.

In the past year, supporters of immigration rights have expressed growing frustration with the president, who has overseen the deportation of nearly 2 million immigrants during his time in office, far more than any other president in history. With a deeply divided Congress now nearing its holiday recess, it seems nearly certain that another year will pass with lawmakers failing to make any headway on immigration reform. Eight demonstrators tied themselves to one another wrist-to-wrist in the falling snow Tuesday morning, and lay down across the road in a human chain, blocking access to an immigration detention center in Elizabeth, N.J. Detention officers on their way to work waited in a line of cars stretching down the street. For nearly a minute, the steady blast of a car horn drowned out the sound of the protesters' chants. By the time the police arrested the protesters about a half-hour later, snow had begun to pile up on their bodies, hiding the slogans on the T-shirts they had pulled on over their sweaters.

today and 65cm of snow accumalation in parts of the Tohoku region. The good news is the larger population of Japan on the Pacific coastline is missing out on the bulk of this heavy snowfall. The snow will also start to taper off in Japan through monday morning caused by a change in the winds which will be shutting off the sea effect snow machine along the Sea of Japan coastline. This change in winds though is a pre-cursor to the next storm to come out of southern China which has already been bringing heavy rainfall to region. Even in Hong Kong showers and isolated thunderstorms have been reported today. This moisture inflow across the city and in to southern china is combining with cool air to the north and a deep upper level trough from the west to produce the potent storm we will be seeing through the first half of the coming work week.

China and Taiwan will continue to see showers through much of Monday as the storm develops and heads east. I am writing in respect of a foreign customer of our Financial Firm with Deposit Code: XXMD-908-14-255-114 whose name is Eng. Ahmed Mohd Elshami, an Egyptian citizen and a Federal Contractor with the Federal Governments of Nigeria and Egypt. My client lost his life along with his wife, daughter and several others in a tragic air accident in Abuja - Nigeria. Since the death of this customer, I personally have watched with keen interest to see the next of kin but all has proved abortive as no one has come to claim his funds of US$25,500,000.00 (Twenty Five Million, Five Hundred Thousand US Dollars) which has been with our branch for a very long time. On this note, I decided to seek for whom his name shall be used as the Next of Kin as no one has come up as his next of kin. In view of this I got your contact through a trade journal on my quest for a foreign business partner, who will be presented to the financial firm as the next of kin to the deceased client to enable them release the fund in your favour.

need no entry visa at the authorised arrival and departure points in Kish Island. At Kish International Airport, the officials will take your photograph, fingerprints, and stamp your passport, allowing you to stay up to 14 days on the Island. Beware: if you are western, you may be sternly questioned as to the purpose of your visit. Make sure you bring all verification paperwork including hotel reservations with phone numbers, etc. Upon arrival at Kish Airport, all female passengers will be immediately escorted to a room and very politely ordered to wear headscarves and long robes to cover their entire body. The clothing is available at the Airport, and passengers are expected to return them when leaving Kish. Female visitors may be detained for a period of time under the perception that they 'might have difficulty finding their way around the island'. However, the staff in general are very polite, but speak little English. If you would like to send us a submission for consideration following the instructions on our site we would be very happy to consider it. However, we would be grateful if you could stop sending us regular postings from your (12hr) project (interesting as it is) as our inbox can only cope with so much. The idea of "Toxicity", theoretically and practically, entrenches itself into the standard phenomenological understanding of the co-constitution of society and technology. The cultural deciphering of toxicity reconstructs not only the current environmental situation, but also socio-political contexts by looking into modes of contemporary cultural and technological production, the extraction of minerals, toxic waste, local and international policies, economy, finances, community-based responses and the thematics of production, consumption approximately 4,300 still images and 125 videos of child pornography at his residence. Four more innocents were released from America's Robben Island this month. Our offshore penal colony at Guantanamo Bay still holds 158 prisoners, 84 of whom have been cleared for release. The men sent home were never charged with a crime and were cleared four years ago.

The releases may give other prisoners a reason for hope if they heard the news. During hunger strikes last spring, some of which lasted over 80 days, the military raided the prison and put 100 strikers in solitary. No one knows how or what information passes to them. At the time, when 100 of 166 prisoners were refusing food, the ACLU, the Center for Victims of Torture, Human Rights Watch and 17 other civic groups wrote to

Pentagon boss Chuck Hagel that force feeding detainees was "cruel, inhuman and degrading" --- the treaty definition of torture --- and called for its immediate and permanent cessation. Hagel also got a letter from Jeremy Lazarus, the president of the American Medical Association, who charged that doctors helping force-feed prisoners against their will violated "core ethical values of the medical profession." From February to June, the White House presided over the torturous force-feeding of at least 21 bound prisoners, a choking and gagging experience in which plastic tubes are shoved through the and disposal. The project considers the changes that Toxicity causes in the cultural, socio-political, psychological (in the sense of Guattari's Planetary Psychopathology) and ecological landscape relating to art and technology by looking into Info-Pathologies and the methods and manners of the "infiltration" of technologies into facets of ordinary life, thereby challenging the inherited taxonomies. "Toxicity" also connects to biopolitical conflicts in the real and virtual worlds involving: energy control and the choice of fuel material and alternative energy sources; the thematic of entropy; the inheritance and programmability of life; the causes and consequences of environmental changes; the question of environmental sustainability; micro and macro ecology; GM products, life, death and appearance. The dualities of power and right, sovereignty and law, are inextricably bound to contemporary biopolitical discourses. In Foucault's own words: "For capitalist society it is the biological that is important before everything else; the biological, the somatic, the corporeal. The body is a biopolitical reality, medicine is a biopolitical strategy."

message To You From Mrs. Franka David First of all, I seek your indulgence to solicit for your assistance concerning the content of my e-mail, although I am not comfortable discussing it through this manner, due to lots of unsolicited mails on the internet presently, but I have no other medium to do so right now since the situation of my health is deteriorating.

INTRODUCTION: I am Mrs. Franka David; I am married to late Mr.Edoh David of blessed memory, an Ivorienne citizen. Who was a reputable business magnet in United Kingdom for many years before He died of Heart Attack in the year 2011. We were married for Thirty-Five years with a child and our only son died in a ghastly motor accident last year 2012.My late husband deposited the sum of (=A35.800.000.00) Five Million Eight Hundred Thousand British Pounds Sterling with a Bank here in Cote d'ivoire. Presently I am battling with both lung cancer and stroke and according to my doctor, my medical report quotes a very short life sperm due to my present health condition that I only have about 1-3 months to live, I do not know but only

I Spent an hour today unsuccessfully trying to find a transformer for an electronic gadget and then checked my BP: 186! (I think I told you that I'm considering the beginnings of a move to Mexico: now considering Punta Zicatela (but it may be too international: surfers -- certainly cheap: a really nice apartment with kitchen, pool, rooftop views for $300 if I stay for 6 months -- but the BP medications and my general health?, would be a concern and now I'd have to worry about fresh assaults here in my absence... but maybe "getting away" would help (I'd have to bring my BP testing kit:)) I've mostly been "under-attack" most of my life but these last few years under our fascist new landlord and terrorist hospital have been the worst; so I probably assume that someone will inevitably also contest my "free lunch." Learned today that one of my tablemates at lunch (Chicken Provence, Red Potatoes, Peas & Carrots, Tossed Salad w/ Italian Dressing, Holiday Cookie-- which I gave to someone else), is an escaped refugee from Iran (left with the clothes on his back etc.) -- so odd that they would seek refuge in the country of their actual oppression... It's increasingly/surprisingly very different on this side of the river (Willamette runs through Portland).

I'm still just amazed that you/anyone has shows and earns money. Love to see 'em when done.

God can say. That is just my faith as a deteriorating cancer patient. But I pray to God to heal me so that I will be alive and see this work done as my late husband instructed me. Because my present health condition I have decided to donate the above mentioned funds to an individual Muslim, Christian or any faith, He or She will utilize these funds the way I am going to instruct herein.

If I ask my relatives or my husband relatives to use these funds for less privilege ones they will use it for their own personal interest. I don't want these funds to be used in such manner; I know we have not meet before but I want you to consider this matter as DIVINE MISSION!!! I want you and your family to always pray for me because the lord is my shepherd, my happiness is that I lived a worthy life and whoever that wants to serve the God must serve him in spirit and truth. As soon as I receive your reply I shall give you more details regarding this great mission. Remain blessed. Mrs. Franka David hello My name is Goodness Aburey. I was impressed when i saw your profile today i will like to established a long lasting relationship with you. In addition,i will like you to reply me through my private email box So i can give you my picture, for you to know whom i am and I believe we can move from here! waiting to hear from you soonest. Not to mention wind chill will be hazardous for those outside for too long. The high over Mongolia itself will continue to produce colder temperatures for much of North East China this coming week. David L. Cathey of Poplar Bluff, Missouri, was sentenced to 30 years' imprisonment on two felony charges for producing child pornography. He appeared before U.S. District Judge John A. Ross in Cape Girardeau. Upon completion of that sentence, he will be placed on supervised release for the remainder of his life. Previously with his plea, Cathey admitted that over a period of several years, he took photographic images of two minor females whom he caused to engage in sexually explicit conduct. Both children were less than 12 years old when Cathey started taking the photographs. Cathey stored some of the sexually explicit images on a CD. The images of the children were discovered when Cathey sold his computer and failed to remove the CD containing the photographs. After years of being held at the US Naval Base in Cuba without trial, Ibrahim Idris, one of two Sudanese detainees released on Thursday, said US prison officials had "systematically tortured" him in the course of his 11-year imprisonment at Gitmo.

Idris, who has been described by US officials as mentally ill, delivered his comments in a news conference in Khartoum, just hours after returning home courtesy of a US military plane. Appearing weak and speaking with apparent difficultly, Idris gave a brief account of his lengthy imprisonment at Gitmo. "We have been subjected to meticulous, daily torture,"he said. "We were helpless, on an isolated island, surrounded by weapons." He praised the Sudanese government and human rights organizations for working to secure the release of prisoners at Gitmo, which has been called "the GULAG of our times" by Amnesty International. It may be 2013, but the African island of Madagascar is facing a public health threat straight out of the Middle Ages: At least 20 people in the country's northwest died last week from the bubonic plague, and 2012 saw some 256 plague cases and 60 deaths--more than in any other country in the world. One major problem seems to be the rat-infested prisons like the notorious facility in Antanimora, which holds 3,000 inmates. The International Committee of the Red Cross in October warned that the facility's overcrowding and poor sanitary conditions present a serious plague threat--not just to prisoners, but to those outside its walls, too, since inmates' relatives can catch the disease when they visit the facility, and detainees are often released without having been treated. To stem infections, authorities have been disinfecting the prison and trying to trap rats. Snowfall amounts will generally be light, though as much as 5-8 inches is possible in the higher elevations of the mountains. The system will also bring much colder air to the northern Plains and Upper Midwest beginning on Thurs. Read More...

Before you give your houseplants that next drink of water, you should know that, according to Ohio State University researchers, cold water can destroy the ability of root cells to take in water and nutrients. Water below 50 degrees Fahrenheit was found to reduce leaf size, cause leaf drop and eventually contributed to the death of potted plants. Those plants that require frequent watering, such as Spathphyllum and Ficus, are especially prone to damage and should not be watered with water below 65 degrees. Other tests showed that warmer water of about 90 degrees actually stimulated growth.

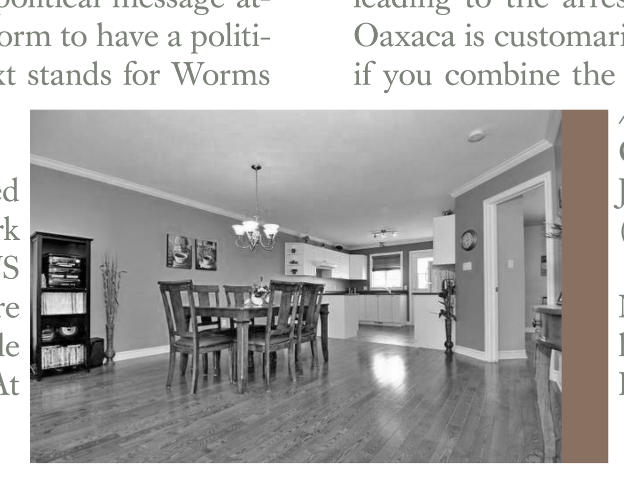
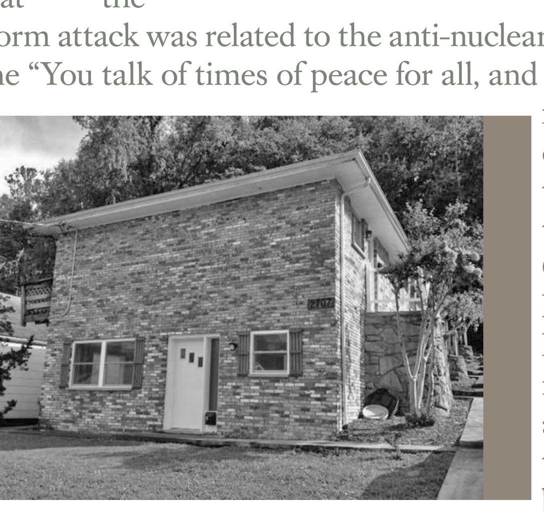
The WANK worm had a distinct political message attached, and it was the first major worm to have a political message. WANK in this context stands for Worms Against Nuclear Killers.



The worm coincidentally appeared on a DECnet computer network shared between NASA and the US Department of Energy days before the launch of a NASA space shuttle carrying the Galileo spacecraft. At the time, there were protests outside the Kennedy Space Center in Florida by anti-nuclear groups regarding the use of the plutonium-based power modules in Galileo. The protesters contended that if this shuttle blew up "like Challenger did", the plutonium spilled would cause widespread death to residents of Florida.

The worm propagated through the network pseudo-randomly from one system to the other by using an algorithm which converted the victim machine's system time into a candidate target node address (composed of a DECnet Area and Node number) and subsequently attempted to exploit weakly secured accounts such as SYSTEM and DECNET that had password identical to the usernames. The worm did not attack computers within DECnet area 48, which was New Zealand. A comment inside the worm source code at the point of this branch logic indicated that New Zealand was a nuclear free zone. New Zealand had recently forbidden U.S. nuclear-powered vessels from docking at its harbors, thus further fueling the speculation inside NASA that the worm attack was related to the anti-nuclear protest. The line "You talk of times of peace for all, and then prepare for war" is drawn from the lyrics of the Midnight Oil song Blossom and Blood; Midnight Oil are an Australian rock band known for their political activism and opposition to both nuclear power and nuclear weapons. The process name of the second version of the worm to be detected was "oilz", an Australian shorthand term for the band.



When Dhondup Wangchen picked up a video camera for the first time in his life, he knew it was at great personal risk. His film, "Leaving Fear Behind," criticizes China's promise of greater freedom in the run-up to the 2008 Beijing Olympics. China's repression in Tibet has only worsened.

Crypto's essential role inprojecting and protecting power requires duplicity to serve officials and counter-officials, know thy enemy, as Machiavelli and others have observed. Reputation building of cryptosystems and cryptographers proceeds duplicitously. Crypto technology, broadly communications security, is defined as a dual-use munition for that reason.

Not being Navajo, there were no "first laugh" ceremonies in my household. But who could forget their child's first laugh? It's like having one of the mysteries of life presented to you out of nowhere, right in your own house. That laugh comes from some unknown place deep inside. It may be a response to surprise (peekaboo... now, I'm here, now I'm gone, now I'm back again!) or who knows what, but it's granted to us, imprinted on us, with a kind of inexpressible joy. The Navajos evidently consider a baby's first laugh the moment you become a social being, enter the human community, and join the rest of us -- and the person who induces that laugh has the honor of holding the ceremony. Anyone who has ever gotten a classic belly laugh; out of a baby certainly has a sense that an honor has indeed been bestowed and that a ceremony should be in order. The laugh is assumedly there to take you through a dark world without a total loss of joy, to join you to the rest of us in the conspiracy of life, and to give you a little distance on what passes for reality. It precedes anything we would normally consider humor, reflecting the deepest comedy at our core. Anyone who has had a child undoubtedly noticed that the laugh also precedes the punch line, that the form of the joke is somehow a pleasure even before you understand why a chicken crossing the road is funny or what that rabbi, penguin, and president were doing in a bar. It's far deeper and truer. When we landed in the Philippines, the first thing we noticed were the trees. Entire groves had been snapped in half and scattered like matchsticks. Not a single tree remained standing.

One of the most powerful storms on record, Typhoon Haiyan claimed nearly 6,000 lives in the Philippines and destroyed entire cities. In the wake of the tragedy, we traveled to the country earlier this month to survey the relief operations of the UN's World Food Programme (WFP). As the world's largest humanitarian agency dedicated to hunger, WFP has staff stationed across the globe. In Haiyan's immediate aftermath, 125 WFP staffers flew to the Philippines from all over the world to assist the national government. Within hours of landfall, WFP began mobilizing pre-positioned food supplies, including rice from Sri Lanka and high-energy biscuits from Bangladesh, to reach survivors as quickly as possible. So far, more than 9 million pounds of rice has been dispatched, along with nearly 400,000 pounds of high-energy biscuits. A quiet weather pattern will remain in place over much of the U.S. through the end of the week. Light snow will continue across the northern tier into New England. Accumulations are expected to be minimal with the exception of heavier snows around the Great Lakes. Elevated to Critical Fire Weather conditions will continue across southern California with moderate to locally strong Santa Ana Winds. Women who report being sexually assaulted by prison staff face abuse and isolation. It seems absurd that a person who has been sexually assaulted would be punished for speaking up, especially since prison policy prohibits sexual contact between staff and the people whom they guard. Yet, in many women's prisons, those who report rape and other forms of sexual assault by prison personnel are often sent to solitary confinement. After enduring over a year of repeated sexual assaults by a guard, Stacy Barker became one of 31 women incarcerated in Michigan who filed /Nunn v MDOC/, a 1996 lawsuit against the Department of Corrections for the widespread sexual abuse by prison guards. The following year, Barker was repeatedly sexually assaulted by an officer, who was also a defendant in /Nunn./ After a month of silence, she reported the assaults to a prison psychiatrist. Barker was immediately placed in segregation and then transferred to Huron Valley Center, which was then a psychiatric hospital for prisoners. There, she reported that hospital attendants verbally harassed her.

On Thursday, a U.S. drone strike hit a convoy traveling to a wedding in Yemen, killing about a dozen civilians. The New York Times reports 11 deaths, while other reports state 17. A recent AFP report states that two of the victims were on the Yemeni government's list of wanted Al Qaeda suspects, while most of the others have been confirmed as civilians.

The drone strike follows one on Monday that killed three people traveling in a car in Yemen. Last week, Al Qaeda claimed responsibility for an attack on Yemen's Defense Ministry Hospital that left 52 people dead and 160 wounded. According to The New York Times, Al Qaeda-linked websites stated that this attack was in retaliation for drone strikes.

This reiterates the sentiment heard in villages throughout Yemen. Mohamed al-Qawli, the brother of an innocent drone victim in Yemen, told Reuters: "These (drone) strikes create more terrorism. In our area there was never anyone linked to al Qaeda. After the strike, everyone in the area started listening to al Qaeda types, exchanging videos on mobile phones." Mezcal can be consumed as a straight drink or in cocktails, such as the Donaj made with orange juice, grenadine, gusano worm salt and ice.

Choose from a variety of flavors -- minero (white), con gusano (with worm) or pechuga (chicken breast). You can also choose the mezcal on the basis of aging -- joven mezcals are very young. A strong drink is the joven white mezcal. Smoother options include reposados, aged for two months, and aejo, aged for at least one year. Mezcals can also be served with herbs and fruits. These are curados. When the Energy Independence and Security Act (EISA) was signed into law in 2007, among its provisions was the eventual phasing out of an icon of 20th-century life: the familiar (but notoriously inefficient) incandescent light bulb, which wastes 90 percent of its energy use as heat, not light. In response, conservative pundits howled in protest, claiming the law would destroy the free market, bankrupt consumers and unravel the very fabric of American life. The destruction and mayhem hasn't happened yet, but that hasn't stopped the grumbling from certain hidebound commentators. What would it be like if people in the United States knew they had these rights and demanded to have them realized? We believe it would be a very different world - one that is more humane on every front. Instead, this week an annual report of Credit Suisse ranked the US as the most unequal of all advanced countries. The unknown female entered the bank shortly after it opened and approached the victim teller who was standing behind a protective glass window. The suspect handed the teller a demand note, demanding cash and threatening to possess a weapon. The teller took the note and alerted another bank employee of what was happening. Both employees walked away from the window to another location within the bank. The suspect subsequently walked out of the bank without any money. No injuries were reported and no weapon observed.

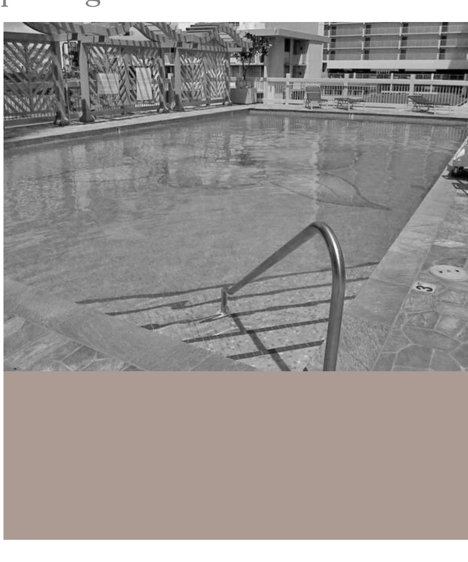
terms set forth in the relevant federal statutes, is not something that must be "earned" by way of a prisoner's becoming a snitch, otherwise providing "services" to the government, or demonstrably abandoning his or her sense of self-respect. It's an elemental human entitlement which the government has no moral, ethical, or legal prerogative to arbitrarily deny and for which it has no right to exact a price. As things stand, the U.S. government has and continues to pursue a diametrically opposing policy wherein mafiosi and other such tangible public menaces are blatantly privileged over those adjudged guilty of holding and acting upon dissident political views. Transforming this ugly reality will require not only that we muster the strength to carry the struggle forward, but to clearly understand and explain the true nature of what we confront, thereby drawing others into the fray.



Today, 13 November 2013, WikiLeaks released the secret negotiated draft text for the entire TPP (Trans-Pacific Partnership) Intellectual Property Rights Chapter. The TPP is the largest-ever economic treaty, encompassing nations representing more than 40 per cent of the worlds GDP. The WikiLeaks release of the text comes ahead of the decisive TPP Chief Negotiators summit in Salt Lake City, Utah, on 19-24 November 2013 Your tour booked with us would be operated as a private tour. You would have a private tour guide, a private vehicle and a private driver during your trip which would only be at your own disposal. No shopping store arrangement, no hidden charge, just a pure travel. You could decide on your departure date, time duration of the interesting places and other things according to your needs, and your travel would be more comfortable and absolutely self-dominating. In the United States, boat building is a $1 billion a year industry, and nearly two-thirds of it--around $600 million worth, according to a 2002 study by University of Southern Maine economics professor Charles Colgan--is done in Maine. The industry organization Maine Built Boats estimates there are about 450 boat-building companies employing about 5,000 people in the state. In this exhibition of human scale canvases, Ms. Weyer speaks to the intimacy of the body, interior and exterior, each piece a flayed mass of colorful forms. Ms. Weyer is a skillful draftswoman who approaches painting with the same confident gestures as seen in her ink drawings. Compulsively drawing with a brush, rapidly filling tablets of paper, Weyer flushes out images from her subconscious and builds an index for her paintings. Swift marks are boldly layered and shapes fall into place, all colliding with teeming energy. Ms. Weyer's process has a decisive pace and timing that maps its creative stages. Each canvas is carefully cooked to the right temperature with a kind of dischordant recipe to achieve its individual harmony. The gutsy, color laden canvases evoke European abstraction and movements such as COBRA, Lyrical Abstraction, Action Painting and Taschisme but are injected with a sense of New York grit. Brash, active, and spontaneous they express an optimism and an anxiety toward contemporary painting. With illusions to primitive forms, pop art, handwriting and the human figure mashed into jumbled puddles of color. Forms appear and disappear; eyes, monstrous figures, cartoonish limbs, jumbled words, trees, suggestions of landscapes, calligraphic marks and sumptuous lines are carved by Weyer's certain brush. Ms. Weyer's paintings have a distinctive capricious mood, like suddenly changing weather. Combining flat surfaces and deep space they give hints of locations and primal events. They are both the record of the process and a state of mind or a window into another consciousness.

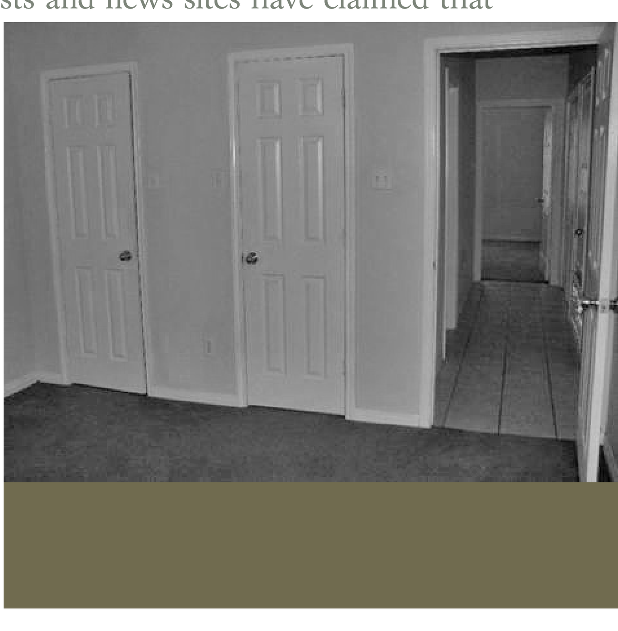
"I like to keep the paintings close when making them. Despite their scale, I want to treat them like drawings, like those pieces of paper which allow me unfiltered expression." - A. Weyer A complex storm system will continue to impact parts of the central and eastern U.S. this weekend. Heavy snowfall is expected across parts of the Midwest into the Ohio Valley through Saturday, shifting into the Northeast through Sunday. Freezing rain is also possible on Saturday from the central Appalachians into southern New England. This year the State Department once again listed 10 countries that use child soldiers: Burma (Myanmar), the Central African Republic, Chad, the Democratic Republic of the Congo, Rwanda, Somalia, South Sudan, Sudan, Syria, and Yemen. Seven of them were scheduled to receive millions of dollars in US military aid as well as what's called "US Foreign Military Financing." That's a shell game aimed at supporting the Pentagon and American weapons makers by handing millions of taxpayer dollars over to such dodgy "allies," who must then turn around and buy "services" from the Pentagon or "materiel" from the usual merchants of death. You know the crowd: Lockheed Martin, McDonnell Douglas, Northrop Grumman, and so on. Many activists and news sites have claimed that President Obama has reached or surpassed two million deportations.



The number two million is significant because when Obama reaches two million, he will have surpassed President George W. Bush's record. Moreover, two million deportations exceeds the sum total of all deportations prior to 1997. [NZ/CA/SG/CL/MY propose : 1. If interested, kindly indicate your interest by replying this email. Note: The job will only take few minutes of your time daily. You can Earn Extra income while doing your normal Job/Business While the president frequently declaims on the dangers of privately-owned guns, his administration is scorning a mandate to track how many Americans are shot and killed each year by government agents. The same 1994 law that temporarily banned the sale of assault weapons also required the federal government to compile data on police shootings nationwide. However, neither the Justice Department nor most local police departments have bothered to tally such occurrences.

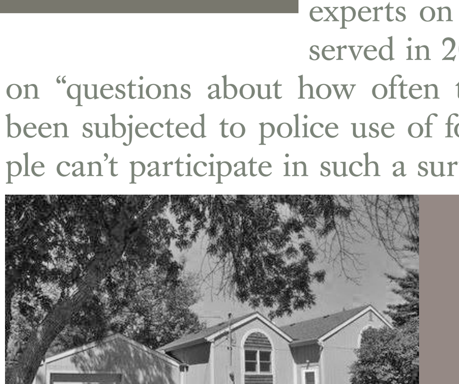
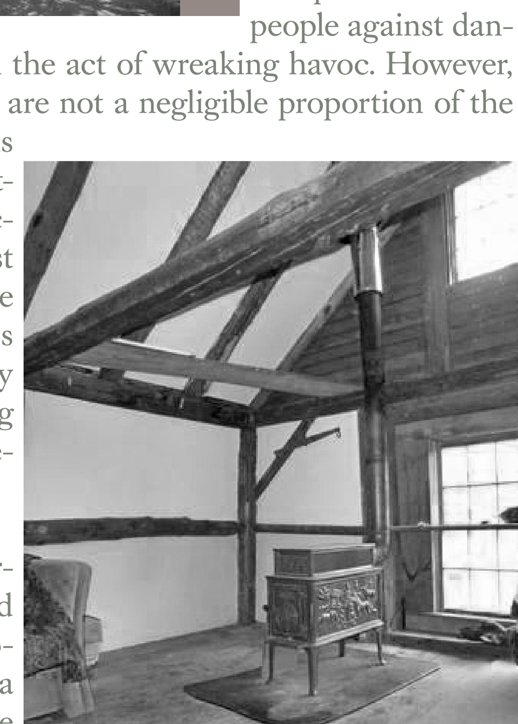
Instead, the Justice Department relied on the National Crime Survey of citizens to gauge the police use of force. But as Prof. James Fyfe, one of the nation's foremost experts on police shootings, observed in 2001, that survey relies on "questions about how often the respondents have been subjected to police use of force. Since dead people can't participate in such a survey, this work tells us nothing about how often police kill."



Many police shootings involve self-defense against violent criminals or protection of people against dangerous culprits in the act of wreaking havoc. However, killings by police are not a negligible proportion of the nation's firearms death toll. Shootings by police accounted for almost 10 percent of the homicides in Los Angeles County in 2010, according to the Los Angeles Times.



Jim Fisher, a former FBI agent and criminal law professor, compiled a database of police shootings and estimated that in the United States in 2011 police shot more than 1,100 people, killing 607. Fisher relied on the Internet to track the casualties, and the actual toll may be significantly higher. (Many police departments are secretive about their shootings and succeed in withholding either numbers or key details from the public.) Fisher's numbers do not include cases of off-duty police who shoot acquaintances, such as the recent case of the married veteran D.C. policeman convicted of murdering his girlfriend and leaving their 11-month-old baby to die in an overheated SUV to avoid paying child support.

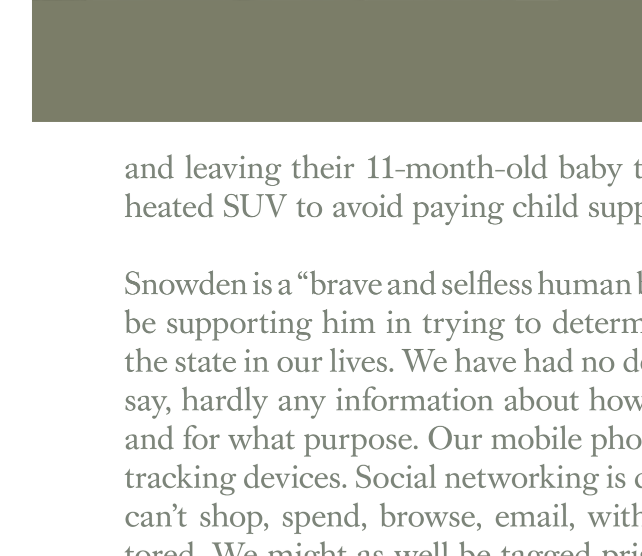
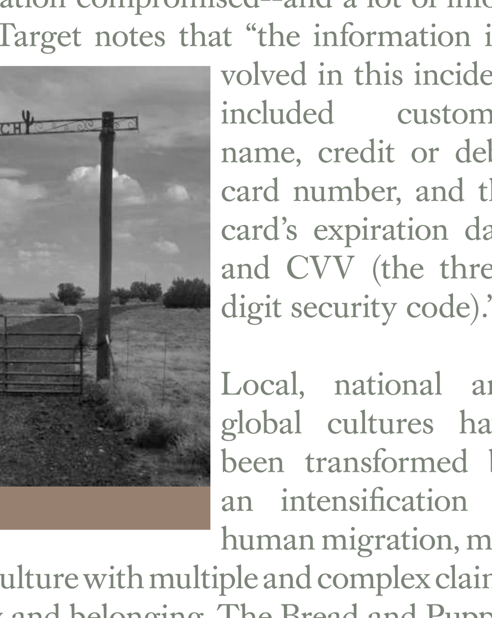
Snowden is a "brave and selfless human being". We should be supporting him in trying to determine the extent of the state in our lives. We can't shop, spend, browse, email, without being monitored. We might as well be tagged prisoners. Privacy is an illusion. After yesterday's rumors that hackers had swiped Target customer credit card information on Black Friday, the retail giant has officially confirmed that there was indeed a security breach--one that potentially affects up to 40 million of its customers. But it's not just Black Friday shoppers who have cause for concern. Though the initial hack occurred on the major shopping day, anyone in the US who used a card to purchase something at Target between November 27th and December 15th may have had their information compromised--and a lot of information at that. Target notes that "the information involved in this incident included customer name, credit or debit card number, and the card's expiration date and CVV (the three-digit security code)."



Local, national and global cultures have been transformed by an intensification of human migration, mobility and multi-culture with multiple and complex claims of home, identity and belonging. The Bread and Puppet Theater (often known simply as Bread & Puppet) is a politically radical puppet theater, active since the 1960s, currently based in Glover, Vermont. Its founder and director is Peter Schumann.



The name Bread & Puppet is derived from the theater's practice of sharing its own fresh bread, served for free with aioli, with the audience of each performance as a means of creating community, and from its central principle that art should be as basic to life as bread. Some have heard echoes of the Roman phrase "bread and circuses" or the labor slogan "Bread and Roses" in the theater's name as well, though these are not often mentioned in Bread & Puppet's own explanations of its name.

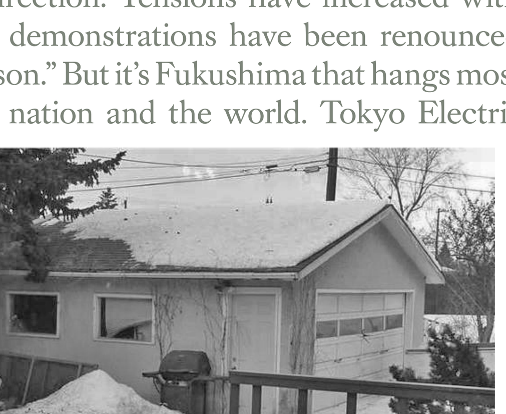
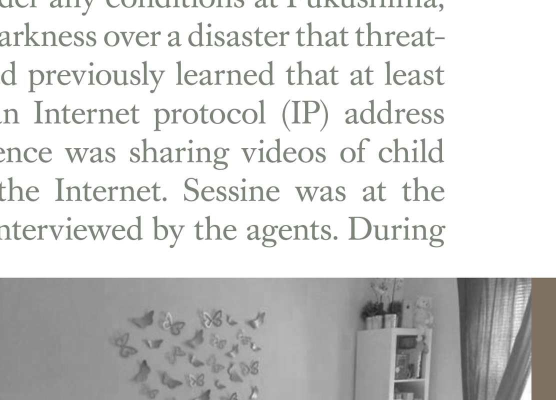
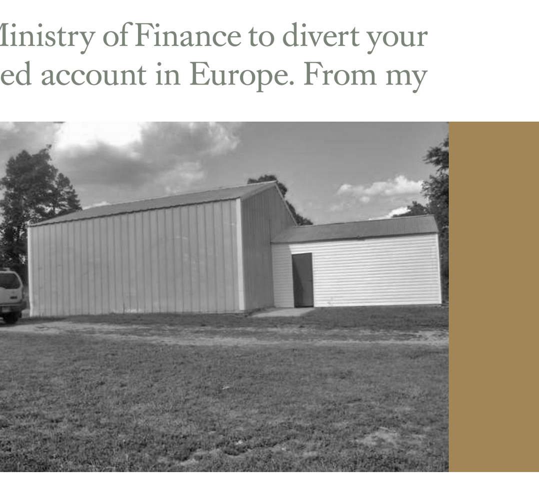
continues to spew out radiation. The quantities seem to be rising, as do the impacts. The site has been infiltrated by organized crime. There are horrifying signs of ecological disaster in the Pacific and human health impacts in the U.S. But within Japan, a new State Secrets Act makes such talk punishable by up to ten years in prison.

Taro Yamamoto, a Japanese legislator, says the law "represents a coup d'etat" leading to "the recreation of a fascist state." The powerful Asahi Shimbun newspaper compares it to "conspiracy" laws passed by totalitarian Japan in the lead-up to Pearl Harbor, and warns it could end independent reporting on Fukushima. Prime Minister Shinzo Abe has been leading Japan in an increasingly militaristic direction. Tensions have increased with China. Massive demonstrations have been renounced with talk of "treason." But it's Fukushima that hangs most heavily over the nation and the world. Tokyo Electric Power has begun the bring-down of hot fuel rods suspended high in the air over the heavily damaged Unit Four. The first assemblies it removed may have contained unused rods. The second may have been extremely radioactive. But Tepco has clamped down on media coverage and complains about news helicopters filming the fuel rod removal. Under the new State Secrets Act, the government could ban--and arrest--all independent media under any conditions at Fukushima, throwing a shroud of darkness over a disaster that threatens us all. The FBI had previously learned that at least one computer using an Internet protocol (IP) address resolved to that residence was sharing videos of child pornography over the Internet. Sessine was at the residence and was interviewed by the agents. During an interview, Sessine stated, among other things, that he used a particular file sharing program to download images and videos, that his preference was for young females, and that the youngest child on his computer was 10 or 12 years old. A forensic analysis of Sessine's computer media revealed that Sessine had collected 107 images and 104 videos of minor children being sexually abused. In accordance to my religious persuasion, I felt expedient to write and inform you on the wicked conspiracy hatched by the duo of JUSTICE T.Y Waziri and Mr.





Lanre Williams of the Ministry of Finance to divert your money to their designated account in Europe. From my position as a lowly clerk in this office, I discovered that they moved the fund from Africa to London, UK and then moved it last week to Banco Italiano in ITALY. Today I found out through the Central computer database that they are about to re-route back your fund to a security company in Benin. With this, I felt that it is important for me to alert you on this development. They are still using your name and contract/inheritance identification number as the beneficiary but they have changed the account coordinate and this is the reason they are frustrating you by asking for endless fees in other to buy time pending on when they will transfer your funds to their designated account in Cayman Islands.



I have the reference number of the transaction and also I have the number of the official who is directly in charge at the SECURITY COMPANY in Benin. Your payment is supposed to go through the UK credit control financial clearing house before final Lodgement into the security company there in Benin. All the data about your claim profile are within my reach. I do not need gratification from you either in cash or kind. I can never be a part of evil because the bible said YE SHALL KNOW THE TRUTH AND THE TRUTH SHALL SET YOU FREE. Please respect my discretion in this matter, you can send an email to me so that I can give you the reference number and the name and contact information of the officials of the security company in Benin. I repeat,please do not expose my person, it is not easy to get jobs around here and I cannot contend with these powerful individuals because they can eliminate me just like that. According to court documents, in January 2012, the FBI executed a search warrant at Taylor's apartment in Redding and found an iPod containing hundreds of images of child pornography.

A New Mexico woman claims in a federal lawsuit that she underwent a brutal and inhumane six-hour full-body cavity search by federal officers that included anal and vaginal probes that made her feel like an "animal." The woman, a Lovington, N.M. resident, also is suing University Medical Center, where she was forced to have an observed bowel movement, was X-rayed, had a speculum exam, vaginal exam and had a CT scan. The suit claims the hospital "violated her" and then gave her the $5,000 bill.

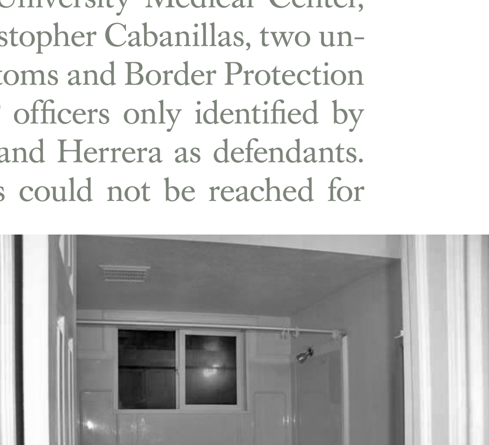
The lawsuit names the El Paso County Hospital District's Board of Managers, University Medical Center, Drs. Michael Parsa and Christopher Cabanillas, two unknown supervising U.S. Customs and Border Protection officers and two other CBP officers only identified by their last names of Portillo and Herrera as defendants. The doctors and the agents could not be reached for comment. The 54-year-old woman, who is not identified in the suit, is asking for an unspecified amount of money and to end the policy that gives federal agents and officers the authority to stick their fingers and objects up people's cavities when they search for drugs.



The "rights" the tribunals are supposed to protect are formulated in deliberately vague language, and are interpreted in a way that rarely serves the interests of the greatest possible number. They include the "right" to a regulatory framework that conforms to a corporation's "expectations" -- meaning that governments must not make any changes to regulatory policies once the investment has been made. Another "right" is to compensation for "indirect expropriation" -- meaning that governments must pay if a regulatory policy diminishes the value of an investment even if such a policy applies equally to domestic and foreign firms. The tribunals also recognise the right of investors to acquire ever more land, resources, utilities and factories. The companies are not required to do anything in return: they have no obligation to the state and can pursue their activities when and wherever they like.

South West Johannesburg (Soweto) was one of those dormitory towns that were a reservoir of cheap labour for the rich and middle class whites in the suburbs of Johannesburg. Mandela was arrested in 1962 for planning "sabotage" of the government and was branded a terrorist by the South African state. The US military and intelligence agencies worked hand in glove with the apartheid military to crush opposition from the African majority. From 1973 the workers of Durban had given notice that there would be new organizational forms to oppose apartheid and the youth of Soweto followed with the massive uprisings of 1976. These rebellions are central to the kind of politics that developed in the period when Mandela was incarcerated after the Rivonia trials in 1964. The sacrifices of the youth and their determination had created new alliances and these alliances matured in the Mass Democratic Movement and the United Democratic Front (UDF). While Nelson Mandela as a lawyer had been groomed to focus on the legal questions of the apartheid laws, the social questions of health, education, housing, police brutality placed the fight against apartheid on a new terrain as the ANC worked to remain alive in the heat of the conservative push of Ronald Reagan and Margaret Thatcher. The formation of the UDF had provided for an alternative source of political power at the grassroots and strengthened the capacity of the resistance to transform their conception of the long term struggles to create an alternative to the social system. While "many suckers-cups at the rear" sounds like the description for an Institutional monstrosity, that is the name of a group of monogenean parasites call the Polypositshoctyca. Let's just refer to them as "Poly-Opecs" from this point to avoid that tongue-twister. They are ectoparasitic flatworms usually found on the gills of marine fish. Seeing as fish use their gills to extract oxygen from their aquatic environment, there is a constant flow of water washing over these parasites, which means these flatworms are essentially living in a high flow environment. So to ensure themselves to the gill filaments, they have a sucker structure on their rear – this sucker anchors the worm in place, allowing it to flex the rest of its body and browse on gill tissue and blood. According to court documents, Barnett used a peer-to-peer file sharing program to distribute child pornography to an undercover federal task force agent on three separate occasions. On March 21, 2013, a federal search warrant was executed at Barnett's residence. During the execution of that warrant, investigators found a computer located in Barnett's bedroom that contained child pornography. During an interview, Barnett admitted that the computer belonged to him, that he had been using a peer-to-peer file sharing program to download and trade child pornography, and that he had been trading child pornography for over 20 years. Barnett was arrested on federal charges on March 21, 2013. A forensic examination of his computer found that he possessed over 250 videos of child pornography, including images of sadistic and masochistic conduct. A front

On November 4, 2012, the Baltimore Police Department (BPD) received information that images and videos of child pornography were observed on David Fisher's external hard drive, located at his residence. The external hard drive was provided to the BPD and examined. Multiple files depicting minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct were found. A search warrant was subsequently executed at David Fisher's residence on November 20, 2012, and computers, cell phones, and other items were seized and forensically examined. The sexually explicit images of the victims were found on the computer and cell phone. In addition, sexually explicit e-mail messages with attachments were recovered in which Fisher solicited child pornography from other individuals and shared child pornography from his collection. In all, over 2,200 images and 100 videos of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, including prepubescent minors, were recovered. The Dual_EC_DRBG algorithm is included in the NIST-approved crypto standard SP 800-90 and has been viewed with suspicion since shortly after its inclusion in the 2006 specification. In 2007, researchers from Microsoft showed that the algorithm could be backdoored: if certain relationships between numbers included within the algorithm were known to an attacker, then that attacker could predict all the numbers generated by the algorithm. These suspicions of backdooring seemed to be confirmed this September with the news that the National Security Agency had worked to undermine crypto standards. While you're doing the day-to-day things in your life, all sorts of thoughts pop into your head. What are they for you? Are you thinking about the fun things to do with your friend later tonight? What to eat for lunch? Are you thinking about a person who gave you an unfriendly look? Worries about money? Brooding over something that didn't turn out the way you wanted? How nice it feels to be where you are? We have no control over thoughts that pop up in our minds. But if we want, we have a lot of control over the thoughts we choose to follow. And the thoughts we choose to follow have a big effect on how we feel. If you're feeling bad, you're probably following some thoughts that feel bad. This isn't to say you should ignore thoughts that are uncomfortable. We need to push and stretch ourselves to grow. But if you already know where an anxious or negative thought leads, there may be no need to follow those same thoughts yet another time. Maybe try catching yourself the next time you find yourself following another bummer thought. In it's place, perhaps choose to think of something you're thankful for. Or, perhaps something else that feels good for you. The choice is truly yours. Please choose well what you do with the time of your life. In addition, sexually explicit e-mail messages with attachments were recovered in which Fisher solicited child pornography from other individuals and shared child pornography from his collection. In all, over 2,200 images and 100 videos of minors engaged in sexually explicit conduct, including prepubescent minors, were recovered. The lighthouse was first lit in 1907, and can be seen from ships 28 miles at sea. In the years before the lighthouse, in the 1880s, the U.S. mail could only be delivered periodically by schooner from Key West to settlements like Miami south of Palm Beach. There was no regular mail delivery to these southern outposts by land. In 1885, the U.S. Postal Service established a mail route that was 136 miles there and back and covered by mailmen on foot. The trip took 6 days. The mailman would leave Palm Beach on Monday morning and take a boat to the southern end of Lake Worth. He would then walk over to the beach at what is now Delray Beach, spend the night, and continue walking on the beach in the morning. It was a hazardous trip, and the mailmen had to cross several inlets on the route including the one at Hillsboro Inlet. One of the mailmen, Ed Hamilton, disappeared and was apparently drowned or eaten by sharks or alligators in Hillsboro Inlet. His body was never recovered.

Passion for outstanding design Giacomo Leopardi was the greatest Italian poet of the nineteenth century and was recognized by readers from Nietzsche to Beckett as one of the towering literary figures in Italian history. To many, he is the finest Italian poet after Dante. He was also a prodigious scholar of classical literature and philosophy, and a voracious reader in numerous ancient and modern languages. For most of his writing career, he kept an immense notebook, known as the Zibaldone, or "hodge-podge," as Harold Bloom has called it, in which Leopardi put down his original, wide-ranging, radically modern responses to his reading. His comments about religion, philosophy, language, history, anthropology, astronomy, literature, poetry, and love are unprecedented in their brilliance and suggestiveness, and the Zibaldone, which was only published at the turn of the twentieth century, has been recognized as one of the foundational books of modern culture. Its 4,500-plus pages have never been fully translated into English until now, when a team under the auspices of Michael Caesar and Franco D'Intino of the Leopardi Centre in Birmingham, England, have spent years producing a lively, accurate version. This essential book will change our understanding of nineteenth-century culture. This is an extraordinary, epochal publication. The basic pillar of democracy is the inviolable integrity of the individual. Human integrity extends beyond the physical body. In their thoughts and in their personal environments and communications, all humans have the right to remain unobserved and unmolested.

This fundamental human right has been rendered null and void through abuse of technological developments by states and corporations for mass surveillance purposes. A person under surveillance is no longer free; a society under surveillance is no longer a democracy. To maintain any validity, our democratic rights must apply in virtual as in real space. Surveillance violates the private sphere and compromises freedom of thought and opinion. Mass surveillance treats every citizen as a potential suspect. It overturns one of our historical triumphs, the presumption of innocence.

Surveillance makes the individual transparent, while the state and the corporation operate in secret. As we have seen, this power is being systemically abused. Surveillance is theft. This data is not public property: it belongs to us. When it is used to predict our behaviour, we are robbed of something else: the principle of free will crucial to democratic liberty.

The area around Puerto Escondido had been inhabited by indigenous peoples for centuries, but no towns of any size were established during the pre-Hispanic or colonial eras. The bay was known as Bahia de la Escondida (Bay of the Hidden Woman) due to a legend associated with this place. The story states that a fierce pirate by the name of Andrs Drake, brother of Sir Francis Drake, anchored his ship in the bay when the area was completely uninhabited, in order to rest for a few days unmolested by authorities. Some weeks before, he and his crew kidnapped a young Mixtec woman from the village of Santa Mara Huatulco and took her prisoner. While in the bay, the woman managed to escape the cabin in which she was being held, and being a good swimmer, jumped overboard to get to shore and hide in the jungle just beyond the beach. Since then, the pirates referred to the woman as La Escondida (the hidden one) and every time the ship returned to these waters, the captain ordered his crew to search and area around the bay, however, they never found her. Hence, the area became known as the Baha de la Escondida.

From about January 2011 until October 2, 2013, the Silk Road website hosted a sprawling black market bazaar on the Internet where illegal drugs and other illicit goods and services were regularly bought and sold by the site's users. During its more than two-and-a-half years in operation, Silk Road was used by several thousand drug dealers and other unlawful vendors to distribute hundreds of kilograms of illegal drugs and other illicit goods and services to well over a hundred thousand buyers and to launder hundreds of millions of dollars deriving from these unlawful transactions. According to court documents, in the summer of 2010 in Glenn County, California, a concerned citizen reported to law enforcement that he had found child pornography on a computer he had gotten for free at a garage sale. The computer initially appeared to be inoperable, but the citizen repaired it and discovered images of child pornography on the hard drive. The FBI conducted a forensic review of the computer, which showed that the Microsoft Windows software loaded on the computer was registered to the defendant. The computer also contained photographs of Hernandez. The forensic review revealed that there were approximately 450 still images of child pornography and approximately 250 videos of child pornography on the abandoned computer. Many were downloaded by Hernandez using a peer-to-peer file-sharing network.

On January 2, 2011, the defendant was contacted in San Diego on the cruise ship where he worked. Law enforcement agents found child pornography on the laptop he had in his possession at that time. Hernandez admitted that he had abandoned the other computer in Chico in 2009 before he left to work on the cruise ship.

A strong arctic airmass will plunge into the central U.S. today sharply dropping temperatures and producing dangerous wind chills. While little snow is expected with this moisture-starved system, the gusty winds could cause blizzard conditions with any snow that does fall and accumulate. Across the South, moderate to heavy rainfall will begin today increasing flood chances across the Southeast. Cold, arctic air moving across the Upper Midwest will bring Lake Effect snow downwind of the Great Lakes through Thursday. Snowfall accumulations of 1-2 feet are expected in some locations. Meanwhile temperatures will be 10-20 degrees below normal from the Upper Midwest to the Southern Plains through Thursday. Wind Chill Advisories are in effect for parts of the Midwest. Hello, My dear Friend Your item has just been sent out via USPS which may take about 7-15 business days to arrive at you. We bought you insurance for your order with tracking number of your parcel, which is LK887644811CN, and you can call your USPS or post office to check the delivery time after 10 business days. Besides, as we all know that International shipping requires more complicated shipping procedures, such as both countries customs clearance, transit stations etc., it will probably take longer time for your item to arrive at the final destination. Much Appreciate for your understanding on this uncontrollable matter. If you have any other concerns, feel free to let me know.

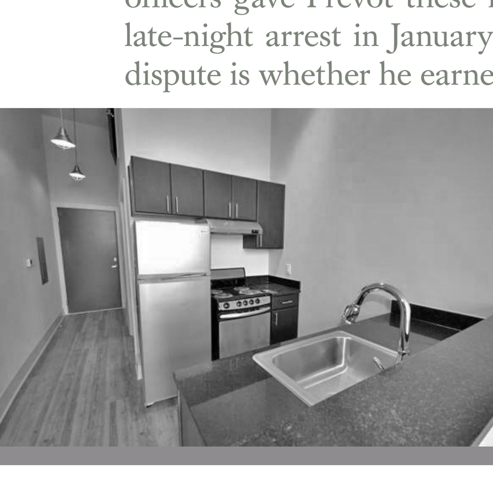
Please be on the lookout for a little gift I have included among your merchandise. I hope you like it!

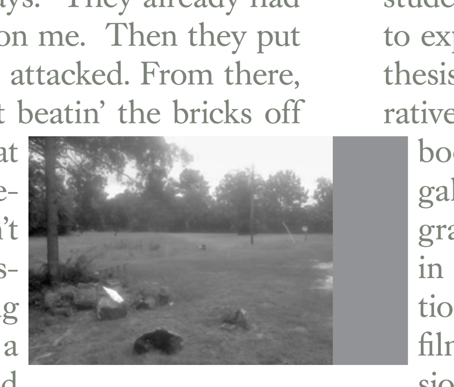
Once the item arrives in satisfactory condition, we sincerely invite you to leave good feedback for me. Your recognition is our motivation in developing our small company. Also please kindly DO LEAVE us FOUR 5- Detailed Selling Rating (DSR), for which I appreciate it VERY VERY much, my friend. Sebastian Prevot watched helplessly as three police officers advanced on his wife. Prevot was handcuffed and bleeding in the back of a cop car. Half of his left ear dangled where it had been torn from his head. The Houston Police Department doesn't deny that its officers gave Prevot these injuries during a late-night arrest in January 2012. The only dispute is whether he earned them.

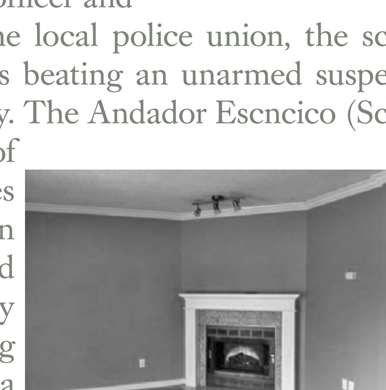
Prevot had been returning home from a night out with a friend. He was two miles from his house when he stopped just past the white line at a four-way stop sign. Two officers in a patrol car tried to pull him over, but he kept driving. Prevot says he didn't want to pull over and continued home--"going the speed limit, stopping at every stop sign"--because he knew he was about to be detained and have his car impounded.

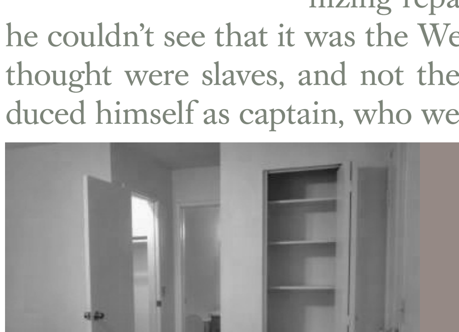


"When they put those lights on," Prevot says, "I automatically knew I was going to jail." Prevot also kept driving because he was scared. "I mean, I saw the cops," he says. "I'm from Louisiana, and it was two white boys in the car in a dark area. I wasn't about to stop nowhere close to there." "What were you afraid of?" I ask. "Getting beat up," he says. "The same thing that happened." As Prevot drove, more police cruisers joined the slow pursuit. By the time he arrived at his house, he estimates 10 cars had him surrounded.

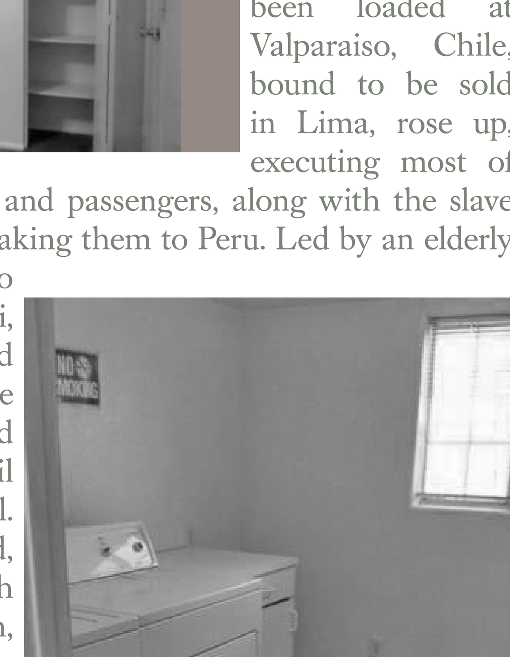
"When I pulled in right in front of my driveway, I got out, hands in the air," Prevot says. "They already had guns drawn on me. Then they put those up and attacked. From there, they was just beatin' the bricks off me." What Prevot describes isn't rare in Houston. According to citizens, community activists, a veteran Houston police officer and even the president of the local police union, the scenario of multiple officers beating an unarmed suspect happens nearly every day. The Andador Escncico (Scenic Walkway) is a set of paths, stairs and bridges that begin at the main beach of the town and winds its way over rocky oceanside cliffs, passing below the lighthouse to a lookout the named Sueo Posible (Possible Dream). In some places the walkway is very near the ocean and gets wet from the waves. On a late February day in 1805 in the South Pacific, Amasa Delano, master of the Perseverance, a sealer out of Boston, boarded a distressed Spanish ship carrying about 70 West African men, women, and children. Delano spent about nine hours on the vessel, called the Tryal. He talked with its sailors, who were few in number, doled out water to its black-skinned men and women, and took charge of organizing repairs. And all that time, he couldn't see that it was the West Africans, whom he thought were slaves, and not the Spaniard who introduced himself as captain, who were in command.







Nearly two months earlier, the West Africans, who had been loaded at Valparaiso, Chile, bound to be sold in Lima, rose up, executing most of the Tryal's crew and passengers, along with the slave trader who was taking them to Peru. Led by an elderly man named Babo and his son Mori, the rebels ordered Benito Cerreo, the ship's owner and captain, to sail them to Senegal. Cerreo stalled, cruising first north and then south, before running into the Perseverance. The rebels began to ready their weapons for a fight. But then Babo had an idea.



The West Africans let Delano come on board and acted as if they were still slaves. Mori stayed at Cerreo's side and feigned at being a humble and devoted servant. Cerreo pretended he was still in charge, telling Delano stories about storms, doldrums, and fevers to account for the state of his ship and the absence of any officer aside from himself. The alabaster-skinned Delano later wrote that he found himself surrounded by scores of Africans and a handful of Spanish and mulatto sailors telling their "stories" and sharing their "grievances" in a babel of languages. They spoke in Wolof, Mandinka, Fulani, and Spanish, a rush of words indecipherable in its details but soothing to Delano in its generalities, convincing the New Englander that the desperation he was witnessing was real, that he wasn't being lured into a pirate's trap.

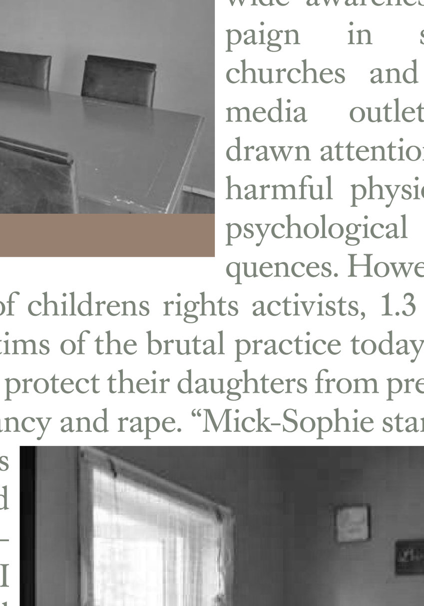
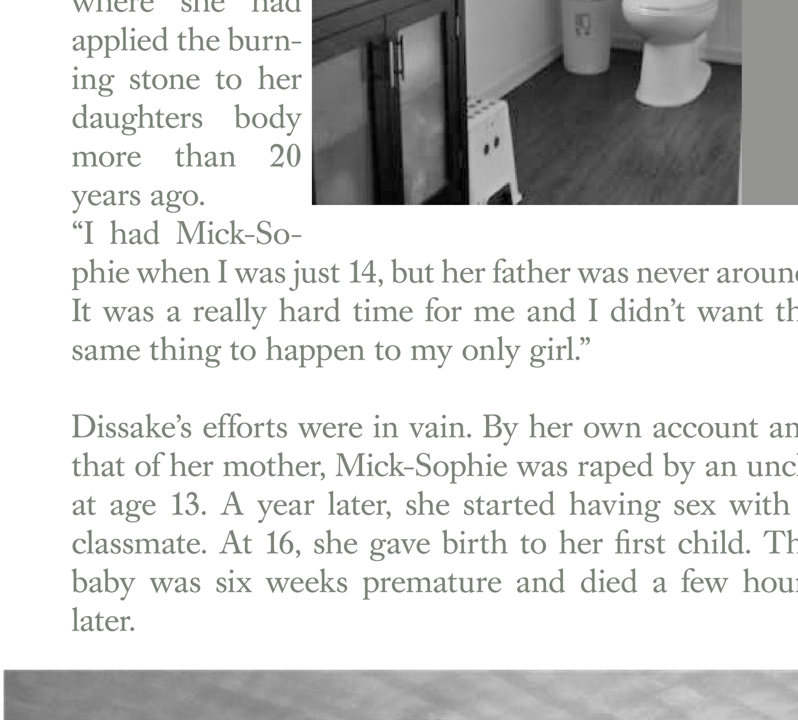
When Mick-Sophie Anne started showing signs of puberty at age 10, her mother took a hot stone and firmly pushed it down on her daughter's breasts in an attempt to flatten her chest. At dusk, in a small, dark kitchen out of sight of the neighbours, Priscille Dissake would heat the fist-sized stone on a charcoal fire and press Mick-Sophie's breasts every evening for two months. Dissake's sister would help by pinning the girl down on the cold, hard floor to stop her running away.

New government research shows that breast ironing, as the harmful custom is known, has seen a 50 percent decline since it was first accidentally uncovered during a 2005 survey by the German Technical Cooperation Agency (GTZ) on rape and incest in Cameroon.

A successful nationwide awareness campaign in schools, churches and across media outlets has drawn attention to the harmful physical and psychological consequences. However, despite the work of childrens rights activists, 1.3 million girls are still victims of the brutal practice today. Mothers do it to try to protect their daughters from premarital sex, early pregnancy and rape. "Mick-Sophie started developing breasts very early and she was becoming attractive. I wanted to guard her childhood and protect her from men," said Dissake, 46, speaking in the same kitchen where she had applied the burning stone to her daughters body more than 20 years ago. "I had Mick-Sophie when I was just 14, but her father was never around. It was a really hard time for me and I didn't want the same thing to happen to my only girl."



Dissake's efforts were in vain. By her own account and that of her mother, Mick-Sophie was raped by an uncle at age 13. A year later, she started having sex with a classmate. At 16, she gave birth to her first child. The baby was six weeks premature and died a few hours later.



Much colder air is expected in the northern Plains on Sunday with temperatures expected to be 10 to 30 degrees below normal. A large portion of North Dakota, South Dakota and Minnesota will be below zero Sunday morning. Some locations will have air temperatures between -20F and -30F with wind chills ranging from -30F to -45F. The program is uniquely multidisciplinary, bringing together students working in film, photography and new media to explore documentary forms and strategies. Students' thesis projects may take the form of documentary narrative films, print-based and interactive photographic books, web and multi-platform documentaries, and gallery-based installations. The graduates of the program can be found in diverse occupations including film and television production companies, positions within the creative industries, freelance careers as filmmakers, photographers and new media producers. Other graduates have gone on to further study at the PhD level and careers in the educational field. The Master of Fine Arts in Documentary Media is a full-time, two-year/six-term program that strives to maintain a connection to documentary traditions while encouraging innovative approaches to the making of new documentary works.

With the advent of the financial crisis of 2008 and the following world-wide general economic crisis living conditions for many people deteriorated. Furthermore, this crisis and the reaction to it by capitalist states led to a sovereign debt crisis which governments responded to with further large scale but this time planned impoverishment: austerity. The U.S. military base in Okinawa, which has been surrounded in scandal in its decades of existence, will finally be closed after years of mass protest, officials announced Friday. However, instead of ridding the small island of the U.S. military's presence, the base will be replaced by a different location on the east coast of the island in the city of Nago to the ire of thousands of Okinawa residents who took to the streets Friday in protest. There is no intended theme for the work; it just needs to fit the criteria of being small art. All mediums and subjects will be considered. No works over 24 inches on either side, including frame, if framed will be considered.

All local, national and international artists, professional and amateur and multiple art mediums will be considered in this call for art. From photography to fabric, mixed media, all paintings and drawings including, oil, acrylic, ink, graphite, pastels, etc. The work must be able to be hung on a wall to be considered. No work that requires special installation or instructions will be accepted. Sorry no sculptures or jewelry at this time. The US devoted more resources to finding Mandela to hand over to the apartheid forces than the apartheid forces themselves. It was the CIA that actually located Mandela, and he was driving dressed up as a chauffeur when he was stopped, and he was arrested and ultimately serves 27 years in prison. The winter storm in the Northeast will continue to impact northern New England with heavy inland snow, gusty winds and freezing rain near the coast on Sunday. Condition will improve this afternoon as the storm begins to move away from the U.S. into Canadian waters.

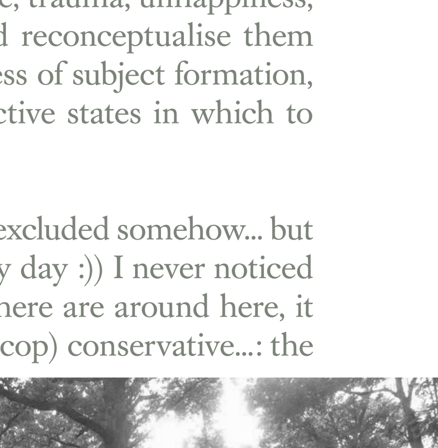
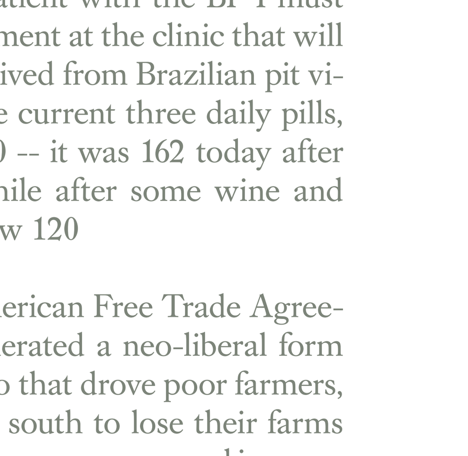
If Funerales Alcal has your body, you can be buried, sent to a crematorium in Oaxaca, or transported to Mexico City for shipment to your home country, within 24 hours. The decision is made by whoever has your passport and is paying the bill. They charge a flat fee of 6,000 pesos ($480 U.S.) for pick-up, paperwork (including contacting your embassy), and burial in a simple wood coffin at one of the four cemeteries serving Puerto Escondido and Santa Mara Colotepec.



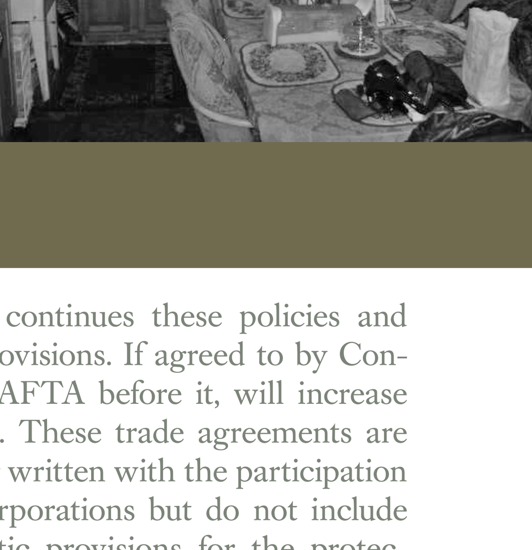
More recent feminist and queer scholarship has begun to productively address the dark aspects of human subjectivity perceived to have a detrimental impact on the self-constituting practices of the positive self, such as shame, trauma, unhappiness, loss, pain, and melancholia, and reconceptualise them not only as integral to the process of subject formation, but critical and productive affective states in which to engage political action.

Unfortunately I still think I'll be excluded somehow... but in the meantime I show-up every day :)) I never noticed how many (Jewish?)-Russians there are around here, it usually feels quite (retired white cop) conservative...: the hallways in the Senior Center are often full of cute chattering old ladies... not many diners but today was Asian Pork Tips with Rice :)



I mostly gave-up on Facebook when they cancelled my previous account with over 5,000 "friends"/contacts presumably because one of them complained about a depicted nipple. I had an auto-post going of my 12hr-project but it no longer seems to work: arbitrary secret change of rules. Getting impatient with the BP I must admit: I have another appointment at the clinic that will likely prescribe Lisinopril (derived from Brazilian pit viper venom!) in addition to the current three daily pills, if I can't get the BP below 140 -- it was 162 today after lunch! but once in a long while after some wine and Netflix movies, it can dip below 120

The passage of the North American Free Trade Agreement (NAFTA) in 1994 accelerated a neo-liberal form of economic growth in Mexico that drove poor farmers, particularly in the indigenous south to lose their farms and their livelihood. In response young men, and increasingly the young women, made the dangerous trek to the U.S. in search of work and an income to feed their families and keep their families from losing their farms.



The 1994 NAFTA treaty contributed to the mass migration of working people to the U.S. Now the Trans Pacific Partnership (TPP) proposed by the Obama Administration, continues these policies and includes many similar provisions. If agreed to by Congress, the T.P.P. , like NAFTA before it, will increase immigration for decades. These trade agreements are being written with the participation of corporations but do not include realistic provisions for the protection of labor and migrants rights.
